Following a three-year multi-agency investigation, the State Department of Commerce and Infrastructure Safety Board announced a regulatory enforcement action against Northstar Technologies.

Regulators imposed a $42 million civil monetary penalty after concluding that between 2016 and 2019, Northstar failed to disclose critical optical sensor drift in quarterly compliance certifications submitted to five municipal transit districts.

The enforcement order also requires Northstar Technologies to submit to an independent engineering compliance monitor for four years.

State Enforcement Director Clara Oswald stated that public safety infrastructure requires reliable telemetry standards. Northstar's board approved the settlement without admitting guilt.
